Training School at Blevins Found to Be a Success

Co-operative Venture by Church and P.-T. A. Groups

12 COMMUNITIES

Blevins Session Draws From North Hempstead County

The Cooperative Training School which closed Friday night at Blevins, was a new achievement for that community. Blevins has always studied its problems with the purpose of improving in every way possible, so the Training School under the direction of the Church and the Parent Teacher Association, was launched by Reverend Charles H. Giessen local pastor, as an experiment in study courses for the Church School and Adult Education. The surrounding communities were invited to participate.

After setting up the program for the school, brief announcements were made through the newspaper and the schools and churches, as to the plan of holding this event. Twelve communities joined in the movement, and the attendance every night proved the success with which it was met. Though the weather at times was inclement, there were large crowds at every session.

The Young People's Class, taught by the Rev. Fred R. Harrison, superintendent of the Arkadelphia Methodist district, had an average nightly attendance of seventy-five. There were between 90 and 100 who attended this at one time or another. There were 52 certificates granted to members who had been in regular attendance. The Community Problems Class was taught by the Rev. Roy W. Fawcett, pastor of Magnolia, which had some 20 to 25 in attendance. Certificates were granted to 18. Mrs. Clay E. Smith of Little Rock taught the class "A Study of Older Children," having from 15 to 25 in regular attendance.

At the end of the week, certificates were granted those who met all requirements. A check-up of communities was made, and it was found that Avery, McCaskill, Washington, Bruce Chapel, Holly Grove, Friendship, Bethel, Macedonia, Marlbrook New Hope, Blevins and Ozan were represented. Practically every denomination and every Parent Teacher Association throughout all these communities were represented. Six denominations were represented in the group. The Arkansas Congress of Parents and Teachers through its representative, Miss Beryl Henry, Superintendent of School at Hope, granted credit to those who had fulfilled the requirements in Parent Education work.

Though this is the first experiment of its kind in the State, it has been so successful that already so many inquiries have been received regarding it that it has every assurance of being an annual event. The fine spirit of cooperation from all communities has shown what can be accomplished by working together.

War, Liberty, Travel, Saner Styles, on Tap for Tomorrow

Longstreet Forecasts for Decade 1940-50

Where are we going in the next decade? Stephen Longstreet, author of the best-seller "Decade," gives his idea of the answer in this article written especially for NEA Service. He spent five years digging into newspaper files for his source book of the 30's, published by Random House, and it is on this study that he bases the following forecast for the next decade.

By STEPHEN LONGSTREET
Written for NEA Service

The decade from 1940 to 1950 will not be any different from the thousands of decades the world has seen before. It is not a lonely little decade marked off in space time, but a tail on the great kite of decade-loaded history.

The pattern will be worked out. The world has lost hope of peace, of kindness, of love and goodwill to man. That is not new.

The next decade will see war, will see the long slant of bayonets go marching off into the sun.

But hope and liberty and the right of men—no matter what their race or creed—to live and breed will not perish. The decade will NOT see the mad men take over the world. They will die by the sword they sharpened; and hope will again be with us.

True, in some future decade, we may see the whole mad, stupid business repeated.

Will the Movies Absorb All Art?

It will be a great decade for the common man, once he is free of the yoke of the warlords. Art, music, writing will improve. Who knows—the motion picture may take over all art form, and men will no longer write books, paint pictures or mark music on paper.

Style will be saner. Paris will die out as a fashion center. Fabrics will not wrinkle so easy.

The cities will stop growing. People will move back to the soil. The danger of air raids will be too great to spend millions on great buildings; industry will hide its plants and men will go back to God's green earth—each family with a house and some ground for a garden. In this way the bumper will prove a blessing.

Hope for Dust Bowl, Maybe None for Gold

People will travel again. We will see the first autoairplane in many garages.

Television will work better, but people will still go to ball games and prize fights and hunt deer and fish. The dust bowls will be forests; the rivers will be banked against floods.

The next decade may make gold so worthless that children's toys may be made from it. Nonsense? Perhaps, but we have most of the world's gold. If the nations of the world should discard it—and they are turning more and more to barter—we would be holding a yellow soft metal that would be almost worthless except to dentists.

Free Press Counters Threat From Radio

Another menace is radio. It menaces freedom of the press. The newspapers must remain free and daring. The newspapers at last hope of free thought. Radio is a loud monster which in the wrong hands can do great damage.

But there is no danger as long as the daily newspaper is free to print and gather news in its own way. I do not think the dreadful fear people have of the future will come true. There have always been times of storm, times of turmoil and lament. They need not always be. If we follow the ideals of those who build America and are true to the ideas that creed, race or color do not set any men above the rest of us, then we will see a great decade from the years 1940 to 1950.

Dismiss 3 Suits Against Refunding

Governor Wins Court Action on Pending Measure

LITTLE ROCK —(AP)— Governor Bailey Tuesday won, over opposition from one quarter, dismissal of three suits attacking the constitutionality of his 1939 highway bond refunding plan which will be voted upon at the November election.

Hermon McKaskle, attorney for the plaintiff in one of three suits, opposed dismissal, and indicated he might appeal to the supreme court.

Stephen Longstreet: The next 10 years look better.

Car Hits Bridge, Four Are Injured

Revenue Agent, Three WPA Girls Hurt Near Stamps

STAMPS, Ark. — Martin Mouser, state revenue collector for Lafayette county, and three young girls employed in the WPA with offices in the county courthouse at Lewisville, were critically injured about 5 p. m. Monday afternoon when the car in which they were riding crashed headlong into a concrete bridge abutment about two miles east of Lewisville on Highway No. 82.

The injured girls, Orval Oliphant, Marie Wallace and Mildred Jones, are all residents of Stamps and were confined to the Stamps hospital here Monday night. The four were returning to their homes here when the accident occurred.

Mouser, a resident of Stamps for many years was receiving treatment at his home early Monday night but attending physicians were considering taking him to a Texarkana hospital. He suffered severe cuts about the face and neck, several injured ribs, a crushed chest and possible internal injuries.

Miss Oliphant suffered a fractured hip and leg, fractured jaw and other injuries. Miss Wallace, probably the most seriously injured of the four, was still unconscious Monday night and bleeding profusely. Her skull was crushed, physicians said.

Miss Jones received numerous cuts about the face and possible internal injuries.

Mouser said after being brought to his home here that something apparently went wrong with his steering gear, forcing his car into the concrete abutment.

The car was completely demolished. Witnesses said that the motor of the machine was driven back underneath the driver's seat. Mouser was driving the car at the time of the mishap, he said.

The three girls have been employed at the Lewisville courthouse for some time and have been going to and from work with Mouser.

State Reduction in Rolls of WPA

4,000 to 7,000 Will Be Taken Off This Month

Between 4,000 and 7,000 workers will be dropped from the Arkansas rolls of the Works Projects Administration during April, Floyd Sharp, state administrator announced.

He said he had been notified that additional reductions in the rolls would be ordered through May and June.

The reductions will be Arkansas's share of the 700,000 WPA workers ordered dropped from the national rolls during April, May and June, by Col. F. C. Harrington, national WPA commissioner.

Reductions will be made gradually. The least needed projects will be eliminated. Other workers will be dropped as soon as projects on which they are employed are completed. All major projects will be completed, Mr. Sharp said.

Mosquitoes have a wing spread of more than 4 square yards for each pound of body weight.

Candidates to Get Test in Wisconsin

Sentiment for Third Term in Badger State Vote

MILWAUKEE (AP)—Wisconsin voters who like their politics well scrambled, will get another serving Tuesday in the spring election to choose delegates—24 democrats and republicans each—to the national party conventions.

The Badger state's vote will provide the first test of sentiment for or against a third term for President Roosevelt, and turn the spotlight on the relative strength of Senator Arthur Vandenberg (R-Mich.) and Thomas E. Dewey of New York as republican presidential hopefuls.

The third-term issue confronts the voters in a direct presidential preference vote on the democratic side between Roosevelt and Vice President John Nance Garner.

Two slates of candidates are pledged to the president, one sponsored by National Committeeman C. E. Broun—who is not a delegate candidate—and the other by a liberal group known as the "democratic party organization of Wisconsin."

Each slate has entered four names for the four places at stake as delegates-at-large. Four names also have been entered as pledged to Garner. The thirteenth democratic candidate is a Milwaukee woman running unopposed.

Roumania Urged to Reduce Army

Germany Fears She Will Get Shortage of Food Supplies

BUCHAREST —(AP)—Germany has offered to send 5,000 agricultural experts of Roumania to speed up production of cereals, it was learned.

Roumania will demobilize half a million men. Government sources said it was extremely doubtful Roumania would accede to the request. Roumania had about 1,600,000 men under arms.

Dr. Karl Clodius, German economic negotiator who arrived two weeks ago to take up trade relations, has demanded that most of the Roumanian peasants be released from the army.

German delegates feared that the postponement of the fall plowing due to mobilization, the hard winter, the late spring, and widespread floods, might eliminate possibility of cereal exports to the Reich unless the farms at once, Roumania insisted the international situation did not warrant release of men from military duty.

Dr. Clodius now argues that the speech of Soviet Premier Molotov last week should prove Roumania need not fear any Red army invasion, and therefore safely can reduce her army.

Molotov old Parliament Russia did not intend to regain the Roumanian province of Bessarabia "by force." He warned that French-British Allies were playing with fire in that region, however.

German circles were aroused by the government's termination of a subsidy paid farmers to encourage sale of cattle abroad. A virgorous complaint is expected.

Roumania has begun negotiations with a Japanese delegation over possible exchanges of petroleum for Japanese armaments and with a Yugoslav delegation for extension of an existing agreement for exchange of oil for metals.

Death Valley Scotty

Quits His Castle

By PAUL HARRISON
NEA Service Staff Correspondent

DEATH VALLEY, Calif. — The income tax fellers have been pestering Death Valley Scotty again and they have gone away as bewildered and empty-handed as usual.

Every year, agents of the Internal Revenue Service trek into the desert to remind Walter Scott that he hasn't filled out Form 1040 and to ask how come.

They have heard the persistent legends of a fabulously rich mine. They have seen Scotty tossing $1000 bills on the bars of the night oases of Hollywood. They have visited Death Valley Ranch and its $2,000,000 mansion, called Scotty's Castle which are supposed to be jointly owned by him and the Chicago Millionaire, A. M. Johnson.

The mystery man of the blazing wastes patiently explains to the "federalists" that he hasn't been making much lately—not enough to pay a tax on, anyway. He declares he lives simply and just borrows enough from his partner to get along on.

Like the income tax fellers, I visited Scotty too—but not at the castle. Scotty's Safehold About His Publicity

We drove about 50 miles up the valley to the north and whisked past a side road and sign pointing to Scotty's Castle.

"Hey!" I said, indicating the canyon. "That Way!"

"Nah," said the man at the wheel. "That old sidewinder don't live at the castle. Hates the place ever since Johnson started chargin' tourist $1.10 to go through it. Scotty thinks that's picaresque and bad for his personal publicity. Nossir—Scotty's got a place of his own, real private."

Presently we turned off the good road onto a bad one. It got worse. Then we stopped at a gate while one of the men picked the padlock with a piece of wire.

"The old boy's probably got his telescope and a rifle on us right this minute," he chuckled.

Scotty Still Wears Longies
The car bumped around a rocky trail to an unpainted shack, about 25 by 10, with boarded-up windows. He and he other two men yelled, "Scotty!" a few times, and a voice said to come in.

It was pretty dark inside. Scotty had been in bed.

The plutocrat of Death Valley wore long underwear, a right shoe, and a bandage on the other foot. While he put on some trousers I glanced around. Only wall decoration was a calendar. In an alcove opposite the entrance was a sack of old clothes and a couple of cases of fine whiskey. There was one chair—a good leather one, and he sat in it.

"If you got no place for people to sit down," he observed amiably, "they'll state their business and git out."

Mountain Lions a La Scotty
He hospitably opened a bottle of Scotch, though while he told how the income tax fellers had been after him again.

Death Valley Scotty wants privacy, and he needs it. Right out in the front yard he has a glistening porcelain bathtub. He fills it with a garden hose from a spring part way up the mountain. The mules drink from it and he bathes in it, often at the same time.

He explained his gouty foot with a story of how a mountain lion climbed a tree in the yard to get some meat hung there, jumped down on a heavy table and upset it so that it fell on Scotty's foot.

Stubbeman Will Direct Program

As part of the program scheduled for the noon luncheon of the Hope Kiwanis club at Hotel Barlow Wednesday, A. W. Stubbeman will speak on "Hobbies!"

Following Mr. Stubbeman's address there will be a round table discussion on "Hobbies!"

It is expected that a hundred per cent attendance will be recorded at the meeting Wednesday.

King Louis XVI, of France, spent $1000,000,000 to build the magnificent palace at Versailles.

Begins to Tighten Ring Around Nazis, Cutting Off Trade

Britain Not to Deal With Those Selling Germany

SWISS MOBILIZE

41 Units Recalled to Defense of Tiny Republic

LONDON —(AP)—Great Britain intensified the economic war on Germany in a three-fold drive Tuesday, and cautioned neutral nations that aid to the Reich might render them liable to the hideous fate that has overtaken previous victims of German policy.

Prime Minister Chamberlain delivered this warning to neutrals in a statement to the House of Commons in which he announced the British stranglehold on German trade is being tightened by:

1. Control of the sea, with the navy already having taken "certain" practical steps to interfere with the passage of German cargo ships from Scandinavia, and the halting of Russian ships in Far Eastern waters.

2. Trade agreements with neutrals surrounding Germany under which Britain will loutbid Germany for vital products.

3. Warning to neutrals that their imports from the empire will be cut down unless they limit their sales to Germany.

Swiss Mobilize

BERNE —The Swiss general staff Tuesday called up tens of thousands of soldiers for April 15, 22, putting the confederation close to general mobilization.

The order said various units recalled for duty had been summoned to replace others recently demobilized. It was noted, however, that a few units had been released, and a total of 41 units of varying size had been recalled.

Plane Battles

LONDON —(AP)—British and German warplanes roaming the North sea engaged in a series of brief, but sharp fights in the past 24 hours which reached a climax Tuesday afternoon in a German raid on British convoys which the admiralty announced had been driven off.

Although at least 10 bombs were dropped, the admiralty said, the Nazi raiders were repulsed without damage.

The air ministry announced British planes Monday night bombed German patrol boats near Sylt, German island aviation base in Helgoland Bight.

Rumanians Drafted

BUCHAREST —(AP)—The Rumanian government announced Tuesday it will draft 4,000,000 young Rumanians to form an agricultural army in an attempt to keep 1940 production normal and meet export demands—especially from Germany.

PARIS —(AP)—Any immediate test of Premier Paul Reynaud's strength was put off Tuesday when the Chamber of Deputies voted to postpone interpellation of the new government.

By the Associated Press

German guns, following up a series of aerial battles between French and Nazi planes along the western front, pounded the French lines in the valley of the Saar river sector Monday but military dispatches failed to report any change in the stalemated lines.

The French communique said the artillery fire was "particularly heavy." The French also said several air fights took place Monday but that all French planes returned safely to their fields.

German and French reports on Sunday's aerial battling differed. The Nazi command said seven French planes were downed. The French acknowledged the loss of only two.

On the much-wide economic front, France and Britain were reported nearly ready to strike against the sea route down Norway's coast by which German imports Swedish iron ore.

Informed British sources said the allies are discussing technical points connected with the plan and this was taken to mean everything has been settled except details. It was asserted the allies did not intend to police neutral waters, nor would they attempt to establish a naval base on the Norwegian coast.

The British parliament, meeting Tuesday after its Easter recess, is expected to hear from Prime Minister Chamberlain a brief outline of steps taken to throttle Germany's ore supplies.

The French chamber of deputies also meets Tuesday. In preparation for what may prove a critical session

Voice of Peace Intrudes

British statesmen, charged with the conduct of the war, are beginning to hear distant rumblings that sound distressingly like peace pleas.
The British Labor party, nominally behind the Chamberlain governments war policy, is beginning to have some qualms about the war. The party has under consideration 13 separate resolutions for withdrawal of support.
The various proposals will be debated at the Labor Party's Whitstide conference May 13. War leaders obviously are disturbed. The hostility of the Labor party would seriously menace Britain's home front.
In the meantime, other pacifist groups, emboldened by the lengthy prelude to actual warfare, are becoming too articulate for the government to ignore. Chief among these groups is the Public Economy League, formed during the World War to promote sound economy. Its members argue that a long war might conceivably mean the defeat of Hitlerism and the prostration of an exhausted Germany, but that England, too, would be economically and morally bankrupt.
On top of all this, H. G. Wells, who still enjoys an appreciable British audience and who has been a constant critic of British war aims, has come to the conclusion that the government is "grossly incompetent." Wells said that a recent British government publication showed that "we are fighting for the British empire and imperalism."
"If this is the stuff we are fighting for," he said, "then it is foolish to fight."
The trouble is not so much a conflict with the Chamberlain government as with the fundamental principle of war itself. While the military has been getting up steam for the big offensive, the populace of Britain has had time to wonder whether it's a smart idea to have a war at all.
The World War brought this cynicism and eventual disillusion, too—but not until it was all over. This time it is cropping up before the war has eriously begun. It looks hopeful for the peace crowd. The people don't want to go to war if they make it clear that they don't want to.

Mrs. Chubbitt (employing new maid)—Now, as to your evening out,
I'll meet you half way.
Maid—Thank you, ma'am, but I'm not afraid to come home alone.

Do Loud Clothes Lose Us

There is a streak of the barbarian in us, so far as colors and clothes go.
We are strongly drawn to bright colors and flashy clothes. This might be called a suppressed longing in thousands of persons who do not have the nerve to wear the noisy clothes they secretly like.

The fear that it will make people dislike them deter many from wearing the colorful clothes for which they long. This is not warranted, however, for studies have shown that clothes have scarcely a thing to do with popularity. Clothes are important, of course, to keep in the swim of things; but our popularity depends primarily on us, not on our clothes.

There are two types of persons who should avoid loud or colorful clothes, if they are to make the best all-around impression. Mildred Graves Ryan points out in her book "Your Clothes and Personality":

Fat people or very tall people are made to seem all the more that way if they deck themselves out in flashy things.

And at the other extreme, conspicuously short if they climb inside loud clothes.

Interestingly enough, the urge to wear loud clothes has been found by psychoanalysts to be strongest among those who are sensitive about their shortness—the very thing which is made more prominent to the eyes of others by loudness. Another instance where the cure is as bad as the disease.

For the great majority of us, there is no reason to fear the effect of color and pattern of our clothes on how others take to us. Here is one case where we can safely let ourselves go and do what we have wanted to these many years.

Some may ask, "But what will others think?" Well, they will probably think, "That is what I have always wanted to wear but lacked the courage!"

The original Americans daubed themselves with bright paints and bedecked their bodies with loud patterns in beads. Today, the cosmetics and textiles are better, but most of us are still original Americans at heart.

Nowadays Children Have Good Reason for Looking Askance at Parents'
Copybook Maxims

By RUTH MILLETT

Parents of question-asking offspring are in a tough spot today. It isn't very easy to prove to a boy or girl—who knows what happened to Czechoslovakia, Poland and Finland—that right matters more than might.
Kids today can ask some mighty embarrassing questions of grown-ups who are trying to instill in them a feeling that if you are in the right nothing else matters—and that in the end you will come out on top.
Maybe what parents of every community should do is form a group and help each other out with their answers.
"Answer, please" would be a good name for the organization.
Right in Theory Wrong (?) in Practice
They might invite their children's teachers and Sunday school teachers to join it too—so all the grown-ups can get together on their answers.
They know they are right in their teachings. All of them. But just now it is kind of tough to prove it.
Right here at home, conditions are sometimes against the parents' teachings. "Get as good an education as possible; work hard and be honest and you'll get ahead," they tell high-school-aged young people, only to have them point out—with statistics—the fallacy of that theory.
Bull Sessions for Parents
So if one parent has found a good answer to one question, and another to question—they could swap, and all be smarter.
The young people are trading ideas.
They don't think up all the "Oh yeah's" they offer their parents and teachers. They have bull sessions.
It's about time the old-folks did, too.
A number of heads are better than one.

Experts say the age of a rattlesnake cannot be estimated accurately by the number of rattles on its tail because sometimes a snake will acquire three

What It Felt Like to Play Scarlett O'Hara

Vivien Leigh

Vivien Leigh and Hattie McDaniel in "Gone with the Wind"

By VIVIEN LEIGH (Appearing as Scarlett O'Hara in "Gone with the Wind" at the Saenger Theatre)

A year has gone by since the night we stood watching the first scenes being made for "Gone with the Wind." It was an awe-some spectacle—whole blocks of sets being consumed by flames as buildings in old Atlanta burned. And I was a little confused by the grandeur of it and by what seemed to be a frightening confusion. That was the night I met Mr. David O. Selznick, the man who was producing "Gone with the Wind," and who had yet to select a Scarlett O'Hara for the film.

In retrospect, it seems to me that the fantastic quality of that tremendous fire, the confusion I felt and the feeling of loneliness in the midst of hundreds of people, was indicative of what was to come. I could not know then, of course, what lay ahead—and if someone had ventured to predict it, I probably would have passed it off as nonsense.

Objective View
The unexpected happened: it made me, for these months at least, and whether I wished it so or not, into the character known as Scarlett O'Hara. Now the difficulty is to view that character objectively. That it was a great role for any actress was obvious, yet I can truthfully say that I looked on Mr. Selznick's request that I take a test for Scarlett as something of a joke. There were dozens of girls testing, and I did not seriously consider the likelihood of actually playing the part. Yet once it was decided upon, I discovered that there was no joking about playing Scarlett. From then on, I was swept along as though by a powerful wave—it was Scarlett, Scarlett, Scarlett, night and day, month after month.

Perhaps the hardest days I spent, hard that is from the point of actual physical exertion, were during the time we made the scene where Scarlett struggles through the populace as it evacuates Atlanta.

Reconstructing City of Atlanta As It Appeared in Year 1864

home of Mrs. Basil York, East 14th street.

Circle No. 4 of the W. M. S., First Methodist church held its April meeting in the attractive new home of Mrs. L. D. Springer, East Third street, at 3 o'clock Monday afternoon with 16 members and two visitors present, and Mrs. E. H. Morgan as co-hostess. Mrs. M. L. Rettig, leader, conducted a short business period, after which Mrs. Chas. Harrell assisted by Mrs. W. W. Johnson presented a most interesting program. A helpful and inspiring devotional was brought by Mrs. J. E. Springs. Following the program the members and guests were shown through the lovely new Springer home. The hostesses serve a tempting salad course with coffee.

Aladdin rubbed his lamp—and a city of domes and minarets glittered before him. This modern miracle was performed in building one of the largest motion picture sets ever known. "Gone with the Wind," David O. Selznick's Technicolor production, starring Clark Gable, Vivien Leigh, Leslie Howard and Olivia de Havilland and opening Wednesday, April 3 at the Saenger Theatre.

In one respect, Technical Director Wilbur G. Kurtz claims, his job was more difficult than Aladdin's. The Arabian magician created a town without any design; Kurtz' city had to be the exact Atlanta of Civil War times.

"Gone With Wind" Opens Wednesday

First Performance to Be Held at 2:30 o'Clock

A real Rhett, from Charleston, S. C. home of the fictional Rhett Butler, of "Gone with the Wind" fame, is playing in her first motion picture.

She is Alicia Rhett, descendant of a family long famous in Southern history, and her first screen role is "Gone with the Wind," which opens at the Saenger Wednesday.

It was Miss Rhett's family, so the story goes, that contributed one-half of the fictional Rhett Butler's name. David O. Selznick saw Alicia acting in the Dock Street Little Theatre in Charleston and signed her for the role of India Wilkes in the film. Clark Gable is playing Rhett Butler in "Gone with the Wind," and one of Miss Rhett's first days was spent working in scenes with him. As India Wilkes, she plays the sister of Ashley Wilkes, portrayed by Leslie Howard.

"Like many Southerners," said Miss Rhett, "I had my own notions as to how the characters in 'Gone with the Wind' should look—and I'm happy to find that the players, settings, costumes, everything in fact, comes up to my highest expectations."

Vivien Leigh, who plays the widely discussed role of Scarlett O'Hara, particularly interested Miss Rhett. "She's Scarlett to a 't,'" Miss Rhett said, emphatically.

The Rhett, incidentally, first came to this country in 1890. Miss Rhett's great-grandfather, Robert Barnwell Rhett, was known as the "Father of Secession" during his years as United States Senator.

Alicia's first movie role, though comparatively small, is of considerable importance in "Gone with the Wind," inasmuch as she portrays Scarlett's most acrid feminine foe. Starred in the film are Gable, Miss Leigh, Howard and Olivia de Havilland, Victor Fleming directed.

"Gone With the Wind" will be shown at the Saenger four days, Wednesday, Thursday, Friday and Saturday. Matinee and night performances will be held daily.

The box office will open at 1 p. m. Wednesday and the show starts at 2:30 o'clock.

For his new government, France's Premier Paul Reynaud told his cabinet the allied decisions reached at the supreme war council meeting in London March 28. It was at that session that the allies are reported to have decided to take more energetic measures against the ore shipments to Germany.

Reynaud also talked with his principal envoys in Europe, conferring with the ambassadors to Belgium, Britain and Italy. Still to be seen are French representatives in Ankara, Bucharest, Belgrade and The Hague, who are expected home soon.

Setting up her drive to prevent any valuable intelligence reaching the enemy, the British announced that thousands of Germans and Austrians living in Britain must appear before new regional committees to show why they should not be interned. Of 73,000 aliens examined since the war began, 569 were interned. During the World War 30,000 enemy aliens were interned.

Operetta at Central School This Friday

"A Welcome to Spring," an operetta, will be presented by the fourth, fifth, and sixth grades of Central High School in the high school auditorium Friday night, April 5.

One hundred children are in the cast. The songs are tuneful, the costumes dainty and colorful. All are invited.

There are more than 32,000 different coins in the world, according to estimates.

and, because of the precision of the Technicolor camera, it had to look like a city of 13,000 years that had been lived in for many years by the landy pioneers of North Georgia. To accomplish this, more than more carpentry and house painting were necessary.

Starting when David O. Selznick purchased the screen rights to Margaret Mitchell's novel, the studio's research department had collected a library of books, and documents pertaining to the Civil War period in Georgia and the rest of the South.

Old newspapers from Atlanta, Macon, Augusta, and Jonesboro, especially, were consulted. Diagrams in the collection of Miss Mitchell, actual material used in writing the book also were available.

When the picture was in early stages of preparation, Kurtz, leading historian of Atlanta, was named technical director. Assisted by his wife, Mrs. Annie Laurie Fuller Kurtz and Miss Susan Myrick, he not only helped William Cameron Menzies, Wheeler, art director, plan the streets and buildings of the city, but consulted with the head set decorator, Edward G. Boyle, regarding the objects displayed in stores, and the various signs and advertisements that gave the city and its streets the character of Atlanta in 1864.

Dependable Styles Offered by Penney As Company Observes 38th Anniversary

The local Penney store is in a peculiarly advantageous position for its customers' timeliness and fashion correctness in wearing apparel while protecting them from the expense of buying from the "fads" which would be expensive if they were to be followed. The store is giving them the advantage of the latest scientific processes for the improvement of merchandise, such as moth-proofing for blankets, and other woollens, and sanitizing for shoes and pillows. The merchandising system built up by the Penney Company as a whole over a period of 38 years is responsible for these definite advantages.

The system itself is very simple, but it is completely lies its strength. In the company's history a central office was set up to handle the buying and bookkeeping for the individual stores. This central office is in New York City, close to the great wholesale markets and style centers of the country. There the staff of Penney buyers handle the merchandise requirements for all Penney's 1562 stores. Thus the Hope store has the services of almost a hundred buyers, each an expert in one particular line of merchandise. Yet the store buys but an infinitesimal share of the cost of maintaining this staff.

A most important point is that every style shown in any Penney store is an accepted style—not merely a fad. As one of Penney's New York buyers expresses it, "Fads would be expensive to our customers in the end. After the shouting about a certain style has died, down, the dress is outmoded... and it may not be worn at all. For that reason, we are very particular about the styles we choose—the styles women like and want."

The fact that each of Penney's buyers has behind him the authority of 1562 stores gives him a prestige in the market that he could never have if he were buying only for Hope. Because he buys in tremendous quantities, and pays cash for everything he buys, he gets price concessions which are enjoyed by Hope customers as well as by folks in the other stores located in every state in the Union. Because he places such large orders, he can specify the quality and style he gets are the finest obtainable.

The process by which merchandise gets from the manufacturer to stores such as the one in Hope has been made as simple as possible. Penney's New York buyers really act as merchandise scouts, hunting out the most economical buys in the market, checking up on quality details, contacting manufacturers, comparing prices from different sources.

These buyers keep the J. C. Penney Company store managers informed of what is available in the market, let them know the new trends and developments in every line, and, whenever possible arrange to make special purchases for them.

On the basis of this information furnished them by the buying staff in New York, the manager of each J. C. Penney store decides what merchandise he wants and needs.

He studies the preferences and demands of his community, and he watches carefully the news and fashion bulletins sent to him by the New York Office. Then he places his order for merchandise through the buying staff in the central office.

Thus the merchandise sold in stores such as the Hope store is carefully chosen by two highly selective processes. First it is picked for quality and style—right in New York, from the competitive markets. Then it is again picked out by the manager of the individual store, to meet the requirements of his particular community.

The advantages of this system all operate to the benefit of the customer who finally buys this merchandise. Because Penney's buys to strict specifications, and submits all purchases to scientific laboratory testing, the customer can rely on the quality of Penney's merchandise, and can trust Penney's styles as being not only smart, but dependable in their fashion-rightness.

Seabiscuit's Victory Tends to Ease Anti-Racing On West Coast

By PHIL SINNOTT
NEA Service Staff Correspondent
LOS ANGELES—With pari-mutuel betting legalized seven years, racing is a political football in California.

The running horse is a multi-million-dollar industry in the Golden State. The state's percentage of the "take" is between $3,000,000 and $4,000,000 annually.

Something like $40,000,000 has been invested in the breeding industry in which California ranks second only to Kentucky in thoroughbred production.

The bill legalized 8 per cent as the track "take" and 4 per cent as the state's share.

Los Angeles' Santa Anita track set forth the sport on a scale unprecedented.

Name stables, $10,000 purses, staggering attendance, daily handles of around $650,000. It grew until the track voluntarily cut the percentage of its "take."

Seeking more revenue, Gov. Culbert L. Olson last year backed a measure raising the state's "take" on a graduated scale—the higher the heavier. The bill was beaten in the Senate. A similar idea bobbed up at the special legislative session this year brought charges. The Santa Anita people and their supporters said it was almost a shakedown.

On of the factors, it is whispered, is that Norman Church had a horse named Frolicuity in a $10,000 Santa Anita stake, which it won although apparently out of its class. The commission ordered tests made, proved doping, and kicked Church's trainer off the track.

Seabiscuit Makes Them Forget Political Fight

There was no reflection on Church, but the wealthy turfman is reported to have taken it as a personal affront, and it is said that his idea in contributing $80,000 to Governor Olson campaign fund was to be in a position to help boot off the commission every one having a hand in the Frolicuity case. And those close to the situation declare he succeeded.

A committee was named to investigate racing. Hearings have been held and plenty has been heard about proposed deals for dates "heat" to get political contributions.

Testimony that Church contributed to the Olson campaign to settle a grudge with the Santa Anita owners brought threats of perjury charges from Church Wire-tapping charges and the furor of making or strangling political capital has been at top pitch at a time when the governor and the legislative majority are split, and recall moves pop up.

There was some concern lest the charges result in crystallization of anti-racing sentiment.

If there was any serious thought along this line, it seems to have been pretty effectively dispelled by one little race horse.

Seabiscuit's great comeback so dramatized the sport he has solidified interest in racing in California as Man of War did years ago throughout the country.

California Racing Closely Regulated

Political charges to the contrary, racing has been closely regulated, the commission watching, and newspapermen watching the commission. Any odd looking rides and riders have gotten little study.

Sweepida, offspring of Sweepstar, showed California-bred horses up a notch by taking the $50,000 Santa Anita Derby.

Charles S. Howard has established two breeding farms, with his immortal Seabiscuit's first colts due to show in a few months.

The Warner brothers and scores of others have established pretentious farms—close to 50 operating.

A total of 145 stallions head this new industry. Top Roy, a Santa Anita Handicap winner; Flying Ebony and Time Supply, among other Kentucky Derby notables; two Man of War sons, Son of a Battle and War Glory; Today, Ladysman, and Gallant Sir are sires to be coveted by any breeding center.

The quality of horseflesh, the state revenue and the positive renaissance of thoroughbred raising make it a 100 to 1 bet that the horses, not politics, will be the factor in determining the future of California racing.

Former 'World's Fastest Human' Is Example For Retired Athletes

By SAM JACKSON
AP Feature Service Writer

LONG BEACH, Calif.—Charles W. Paddock, the wonder man of track in the 1920's, has some pronounced ideas on how the retired athlete should take care of himself—and Charley himself appears to be living proof that they are correct.

Today the famous sprinter is 39, and is the crisp, hard-working and successful business manager of newspapers in Long Beach and Pasadena. Despite the constant travel and double responsibility this tandem job demands, he writes a daily sports page column.

"I stopped strenuous athletics at thirty," says Paddock. "I took four years to train down—tapered off, you might say—doing all the preliminary work for a season but not competing. At the end of that time my heart was of normal size and I was physically sound."

"There is one point I'm fanatical on, and that is that I think the greatest mistake made by men past 35 is to engage in strenuous sports. They enlarge their hearts and undoubtedly shorten their lives. I've seen too many of them go bad around 55."

Fairbanks An Example

"Douglas Fairbanks was an example. He was a good friend and we often exercised together. But at 45 and 50 he was doing exercise that would amaze a youngster of 25."

"I think that handball, squash and too many sets of tennis are harmful to men over 40. Such sports as golf, hiking and bowling are excellent for older men who feel they are equal to them."

Today Paddock himself merely plays a little tennis for exercise. The California sprinter first came to national attention in 1913 when, as a mere grammar school stripling, he won the far western A. A. U. championship for the 100-yard dash. He went on to equal the existing record for that race "at least 20 times" and then to set a new one. He also broke the 220-yard record that had stood for 25 years.

During high school Paddock was beaten in only one race in college days was never beaten in competition in the Olympic 1920, 1924 and 1928 to run up a gate point total they're still at.

Since his retirement, Frank and Jesse Owens have beaten him yard mark by a tenth of a second at 94—and his 220-yard time of 20.1 has been clipped by both Owens and Rowland Locke, Owens existing record being 20.4.

"The day will come," says Paddock, "when some man will run 9.1 in the 100 and 20 seconds flat in the 220. This doesn't mean that physically the men of tomorrow will be any better than those of today. Improved training methods, better tracks and a tremendous increase in the good material that turns out will be the factors in these so-called impossible achievements."

SERIAL STORY K. O. CAVALIER BY JERRY BRONDFIELD

YESTERDAY: Val urges Hansen to let her handle the shanghai victims. To turn back will bring investigation by port authorities, more delay. She refuses to turn back, tells Cavalier he will train aboard ship for his fight. "What a story!" she promises. "What a story!"

CHAPTER V

CAPTAIN HANSEN'S jaw sagged a full inch. "Val," he said softly, "how in thunder is that box-fighter going to train on board the 'Belle'?"

Duffy Kelso looked sick. Eddie Cavalier looked at her with eyes that said he longed to get his hands around her throat.

"Miss Douglas," it was Pop Grimes, pleading with her. "Honest, lady, this is as funny as a crutch. Your admiral there, is right. Even if you don't put around and take us back to Frisco how can Eddie get in shape here?"

She was quite cool and informative in her answer. "Simple stuff, gents. In the first place I know Cavalier is just about in shape already. He had a strenuous indoor season. Three fights, if I remember correctly. He doesn't need much training for this one. I know he happens to be all through with his heavy work. Just last week, you, Pop Grimes, gave out a story to the effect that Eddie looked over-trained... that you weren't going to have him do much more than road work, some light work on the bags and a little sparring. Right?"

Pop Grimes licked his lips. "Right," he whispered. "But..."

"But nothing," she flashed. "It so happens that Mike Kelly, who you probably remember as a pretty fair heavyweight a few years back, is a seaman aboard this ship. Fortunately for us he has a couple sets of gloves and a light bag which he and some of the boys use in their spare time. Mike'll be as good a sparring partner as you'd want. And Cavalier can do all the road work he wants to around the deck."

Duffy Kelso just sat there and groaned. She looked at him and laughed.

"Before I get through, Duffy, you're going to thank me."

"Shoot you, you mean."

"Go ahead," Cavalier said grimly. "This is the most fantastic thing I've come across since Jules Verne."

"We can pitch a ring on the after deck."

Pop Grimes clapped a hand to his cheek and groaned again. "But his timing—his timing. It'll be ruined. This tub probably pitches like a bucking bronco. It'll throw him so far off balance he'll fall flat on his face."

"Wrong again. This vessel is the smoothest floating freighter on the Pacific. And a guy who punches as sharp as Cavalier doesn't have to worry about losing his timing in a few days."

Eddie Cavalier presented her with a mock bow. "Such flattery must come from the heart," he murmured. "To think you might have a good word to say about me."

"Make the most of it," she retorted. "It might be the last one."

DUFFY KELSO shook his head mournfully. "Eddie, it looks like this dame is going through with it. Maybe we oughta wire Sam Golden and tell him to cancel."

Then turning once again to Val. "Look, lady. Sam Golden is our promoter we want to do right by. He had to work on Mike Jacobs plenty hard to get this fight in Frisco. We owe Sam a lot. He gave us our start three years ago. What'll we tell him?"

"That's exactly why you can't cancel, Duffy. You see, I know what ground I'm treading on. You can't let Golden down now. And you also know darn well that if you don't get a crack at the champ now he'll stall you off for another year."

Duffy Kelso spread his hands eloquently. "This dame, Pop... she knows all the angles."

"Right again, Kelso." And then it was Val Douglas who was pleading.

"Duffy, it'll be terrific. Can't you see it? All you've got to do is wire Sam Golden that everything is okay. That this was a surprise move on your part... Didn't want to tell anyone, not even him. You can explain that you wanted to get Eddie away from the usual hurly-burly of the training grind... That Eddie needed the rest as much as the private training quarters."

"Duffy, it's great publicity. Terrific, Duffy. I'll pack that ball park so that an undernourished gnat won't be able to get in. It's the natural of the century, Kelso, and if you can't see it you're not as bright as I think you are."

Pop Grimes was bug-eyed. Eddie Cavalier stared at her wonderingly. Steve Hansen was awed. And over Duffy Kelso's face stole a far-away look of understanding.

"I wish it wasn't you," he said. "I wish it wasn't you because I think maybe you got something."

"Sure I got something, Duffy," she purred. "Per awhile, though, I thought you were going to be a little hard to handle, what with such swell physical support you have behind you," she concluded, eyeing Cavalier deliberately.

She turned to Hansen. "They're your playmates for the time being, Stevie—have fun."

VAL leaned against a lifeboat, letting a soft spring wind blow through her hair when she heard footsteps on the deck. She turned around quickly. It was Eddie Cavalier.

"Oh... it's you."

"Yeah... me. Aren't you afraid I'll throw you overboard?"

He looked up at the dark, overcast sky. "Good night for something like that and no one's around."

"You're positively gruesome. It's wonder they never tagged you Killer Cavalier."

"Of course you know there wouldn't be a jury in the world that would convict me."

She laughed mockingly. "Of course not." And then changing the subject. "How goes it with friends Kelso and Grimes? Are they settled for the night? They're such sweet people."

"Last I saw of them," he replied, not without a trace of humor, "they were trying to figure out how a human being goes about sleeping in those iron double-deck bunks."

"You're practically on a luxury liner. What would you do if we had hammocks?"

For the first time that night he smiled, and she figured it must have hurt him terribly for the effort.

"You weren't serious about making us work?" he asked.

"Quite," she said icily. "That was the purpose of the thing in the first place, you know."

"And if we refuse..."

"You simply don't eat," she said blandly.

"I never was one to shirk a little labor," he said quietly, "but don't you think you ought to make a little concession in my case. I've still got a lot at stake, you know."

"I'll have to think about that," she said. "Well see if Captain Hansen can spare you entirely, or at least part of the time."
